TERRIFIC GALES ALONG CHANNEL CLAIM LIVES

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The storm-battered channel coasts of both France and England recovered their breath today following a terrific three-day gale that at times mounted to a velocity of 100 miles an hour.

Nine persons were known to have perished on the French side of the coast, with damage to coastal property and shipping feared extremely heavy.

According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Boulogne, the trawler Notre Dame Des Argentes limped into port hours behind schedule with two survivors of the

CONGRESS MOVE TO HALT SPECULATION IN GRAINS LOOMING

Farm Bloc Incensed By Soviet Grain Manipulation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The possibility that congress may move to stamp out all speculation in grains loomed today as the Hoover administration awaited action by the Chicago Board of Trade on its charges that Soviet Russia has initiated a campaign to press American grain prices.

Leaders of the senate farm bloc were incensed over the outspoken charges of Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde that a Soviet business corporation had executed a "short selling campaign" of 5,000,000 bushels of wheat to smash prices and "breed discontent among American farmers."

It was certain they would initiate senatorial action as soon as congress reconvenes in December.

House leaders showed a like interest in the charges and the special "anti-Red" committee, headed by Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., (R) of New York, will initiate a separate inquiry this week. Fish revealed he would send out committee investigators to learn the identity of the American brokers who handled the Russian account. He said he will summon the brokers to the witness stand to develop every angle to the Russian campaign.

The Fish inquiry though will be undertaken, not to halt gambling on the grain exchanges, but to determine whether Soviet Russia is engaged in an anti-American industrial and commercial program in this country. His committee ultimately may recommend legislation to control Russian business activities in this country or at least to set up protective defenses against Russian commercial invasions. Within recent months, the treasury department barred Russian lumber imports but later rescinded the order. Some such move may be recommended by the house committee.

The Hoover administration meanwhile was awaiting some disciplinary action by the Chicago Board of Trade against its broker-members who handled the Russian account. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde charged that the brokers had handled selling orders for 5,000,000 bushels of wheat for future deliveries for the all-Russian textile syndicate, a subsidiary of the Soviet Amtorg Trading Corporation, a government organization. He said the Russians never intended to import wheat from Russia to fill these selling orders but hoped merely to smash down wheat prices in the country, later buying enough grain here at lower prices to fill the orders.

THINK DAYTON HIDES KILLER

Fred Burke Believed In This Locality

DAYTON, O., Sept. 22.—Police here today were on the alert following reports that Fred Burke, notorious gangster who is wanted for the famous St. Valentine's day massacre in Chicago in 1929 when seven members of the "Bugs" Moran-Allelo gang were lined up against a wall and shot down, was hiding in this city. Two other well-known gunmen, Raymond "Crane-Neck" Nugent and Ted Newberry, are believed to be with him.

Detectives Joseph Schaefer and Walter Conroy, of Cincinnati, expressed the belief that the trio is somewhere in this vicinity following the escape of three yegmen Saturday night from the Stockton Club, a reputed gambling resort, near Hamilton. The men, who are believed to be Burke and the two other notorious killers, made their getaway from the club just a short time before Sheriff Luther Epper-son, of Butler County, and a number of deputies found a stolen Springfield, O. automobile in a garage in the rear of the club. The machine was loaded with explosive, machine guns and safe-blowing equipment.

THREATENED LYON

Young Richard McEneaney's ambitions to become a movie actor led the New York youth into the hands of Los Angeles police when he took a novel means to crash the gates of Hollywood. According to the police, McEneaney selected Ben Lyon, film star, as a victim, and wrote a series of death threat letters, accusing Lyon of causing the suicide of McEneaney's sister and declaring he intended killing Lyon. Police found him, heavily armed. They say he told them he thought he could gain sufficient notice for a movie try-out by his scheme.

BISHOP CANNON AND WIFE LEAVE BRAZIL AFTER SHORT VISIT

Cleric Coming Home After Cutting His Visit Short

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 22.—Cutting short by two months his visit to Brazil, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, was on his way to the United States today aboard the liner American Legion.

News of the Bishop's departure causes something of a surprise among his friends and church workers in Brazil. It was generally believed he was in the interior of the country varying his church work with study and exploration.

Bishop Cannon arrived in Brazil August 10. He planned to remain until the end of November. Headquarters of the Methodist Episcopal Church here refused any information concerning the bishop's departure. The sailing was made with utmost secrecy, the bishop refusing all interviews before his departure for Santos, where he boarded the vessel.

The bishop was accompanied by his bride, the former Helen MacCallum, who before their marriage in London a short while ago was his confidential secretary. Mrs. Cannon sailed under the name of Mrs. MacCallum, giving her nationality as American, her age as 42 and her occupation as "missionary." Both Bishop Cannon and his wife sailed second class.

WASHINGTON BANKS PROBED

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., Sept. 22.—A probe into the failure of the Ohio State Bank and the Peoples and Drovers Bank was instituted by the Payette County grand jury here today.

Seven thousand depositors lost money due to the failures, which forced Mal Daugherty, president of the Ohio State Bank, into involuntary bankruptcy. He is a brother of Harry M. Daugherty, who served as attorney general in the Harding cabinet.

TREASURY BALANCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The treasury balance as of Sept. 19, was $297,666,696.70; expenditures $4,833,182.58; customs receipts $22,847,914.59.

CHANGING OF PARTY BALANCE OBJECT AS CAMPAIGN STARTED

Reduction Of G. O. P. Majority Aim Of Democrats

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The big guns start boom-booming against the national political front this week.

With primaries ended, candidates nominated, the party managers now step into control of things, and for the next six weeks the air will be filled with fur and feathers in the biennial battle for control of the next congress.

That the Democrats are due for some sharp gains in the house is conceded on all sides. The Democrats gleefully proclaim it; the Republicans rather grudgingly admit it. It would be miraculous if the Democrats did not gain materially, for the Republicans are now enjoying the greatest majority they have ever had in the house, and invariably the pendulum swings back between presidential elections.

"The Republican majority will be reduced, but it will be sufficient," predicts Representative John J. Tilson, Republican leader of the house.

"The Republican majority will be reduced—to the point of invisibility," retort the Democratic spokesmen.

To the anticipated normal off-year swing against the party in power is added this year the effects of sagging business conditions, widespread unemployment, the lowest grain and commodity prices in many years with accompanying resentment in the agricultural regions, and bitter prohibition struggles in scores of districts. These latter fights cut into both parties, although the Republicans generally are to be found on the dry side.

Already the Republicans have sounded the Boscini of "stand by the president." Every Republican keynoter to date has signified the Republican determination to go the country on the record of the administration, and demanded a vote of confidence thereon. The same sentiment will be expressed this week by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson when he "keynotes" the Republican convention in New York State.

The Democrats have accepted with alacrity the opportunity to go to the country "on the record."

Amplified for the first time in many years, militant and aggressively confident, they plan during the next six weeks to proclaim from every stump that "Honest government has promised two years ago to have a better government; that the farmers are now worse off than they were before the passage of the Hoover farm relief law; that there is unemployment and breadlines in the cities; that the Republican tariff bill is re-

HOTEL BOMBED AND FEUD IS BLAMED

EASTON, Pa., Sept. 22.—Three men in a speeding car bombed the Plaza Hotel at Belfast near here early today, wrecking the front porch and shattering every window in the structure.

Windows in nearby buildings also were shattered and the entire neighborhood for several blocks felt the concussion from the blast. The hotel was unoccupied and it is believed no one was injured.

The explosion climaxed a series of bombings which have taken place in Northampton County within the past few months. Police believe all of them have been due to a feud between rival gangs of roadhouse proprietors.

JEWISH NEW YEAR STARTS HOLY DAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The sounding of Shofar, the ram's horn, at Sundown today will usher in Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year. Today marks the beginning of the year 5691 of the Jewish reckoning.

The season of Holy days will end October 1, the day of atonement or Yom Kippur.

President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt of New York sent messages to American Jewry to mark the holidays and lauding the Jewish race for its achievements.

Mayor Moves Out

ROGERS, O., Sept. 22.—After being left without a mayor when Harvey D. Cope moved to Columbus and didn't take the trouble to submit his resignation, this little village today anticipated the installation of a new chief executive—Chauncey Green, president of the council.

The council, it was said, will simply declare Cope's office vacant and appoint Green as his successor at a special meeting which is scheduled for Wednesday night.

OHIO FARMERS MUST SPEND $10,000,000 ON WINTER FEEDING

Drought Will Cause Immense Expense To Agriculture

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22.—At least $10,000,000 will be spent by Ohio farmers outside of the Buckeye state for feed to maintain stock during the coming winter as a result of the drought this summer, according to a survey which was conducted by C. R. Arnold, chairman of the drought committee of the agricultural extension service of Ohio State University.

The survey shows that in 66 per cent of the counties of this state, the income on many farms will be completely wiped out this year.

Farmers reported sales of 2.1 per cent of their dairy cattle, 20 per cent of their hogs, 5.3 per cent of their sheep, and 9.9 per cent of their beef cattle because of drought conditions.

As a result of the drought and market prices for dairy products, lambs and wool, farmers plan to keep about 3 per cent less cattle, 9 per cent less sheep, 20 per cent less hogs, and 31 per cent less beef cattle than a year ago.

CLAIMS SOVIETS EXPLOIT AMERICAN LABOR

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Charges that the Soviet government is holding prisoner 450 skilled automobile mechanics who were persuaded last year to sign contracts to work in a Stalingrad tractor factory were made in the Daily Mail today by Herbert Lewis, an American who was evicted from Russia for striking a Negro worker in one of the plants.

The Americans are forced to work for practically nothing be-

MECHANIC IS UNDER ARREST FOLLOWING THREATS TO MURDER

Lester Rhinisperger Is Beaten Resisting Police Chief

Beaten into submission with a blackjack in a hand to hand fight with Police Chief O. H. Cornwell after he is alleged to have made threats to kill his wife and his mother-in-law Monday noon, Lester Rhinisperger, 22, Goes, auto mechanic, was lodged in a cell at police headquarters to await arraignment in Municipal Court on probable charges of carrying concealed weapons and resisting an officer.

The altercation took place at the home of the mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Hipshire, 27 Locust St., where Chief Cornwell was summoned by a neighbor.

Arriving at the house the police chief dashed into the kitchen, he said, just in time to see Rhinisperger menacing his wife, Dora and mother-in-law with a revolver. Rhinisperger whirled around and pointed the weapon at the officer but before he could pull the trigger Chief Cornwell struck him with his mace and wrenched the gun from his grasp.

Pocketing the revolver, the chief grappled with the man and finally overpowered and handcuffed him. As he was being led out of the house, Rhinisperger is alleged to have again tried to break away but a rain of blows on the face and head soon quieted him and the chief took him to police headquarters in the police car.

Chief Cornwell said that he was informed the trouble between Rhinisperger and his wife dates back two months when the husband assaulted her one night. He had been fined $25 and costs for intoxication last August 5 and on August 11 he was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to serve thirty days in jail on the assault charge filed by his wife.

While he was in jail his wife recently instituted suit for divorce. Rhinisperger, who was only recently released from jail, is said to have met his wife when she quit work at a local factory at 11:30 a. m. Monday and accompanied her home.

Reaching the home of his wife's mother, where she has been staying, Rhinisperger is said to have drawn a revolver and menaced the two women. Mrs. Hipshire called a neighbor and police were notified.

The revolver in Rhinisperger's possession was of .32 caliber and the chamber contained three cartridges. The gun had not been fired.

Police records show that last August 12 Rhinisperger was captured at Goes after a long automobile chase by police. At that time a .25 caliber automatic was found in his possession. Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith fined him $100 and costs for possessing liquor.

THREE XENIA HOMES LOOTED BY BURGLAR ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Discriminating Thief Equips Wardrobe For Autumn

A discriminating thief who ransacked the residence of R. W. Haws, 280 N. Detroit St., early Saturday night, stole a twelve-gauge, double barrel shot gun, a flashlight, traveling bag, a fountain pen, white shirt, a gray flannel shirt and miscellaneous toilet articles, including two razors, a set of military brushes, two tooth brushes, two tubes of tooth paste, a shaving mirror, shaving soap, a nail file, a bottle of perfume and a dozen handkerchiefs.

The robbery was reported at 11 p. m. and police investigation indicated the intruder had used a skeleton key to gain entrance through the front door.

The same thief is believed to have been responsible for two other instances of house-breaking reported early Saturday evening.

D. L. Gregg, 20 Union St., reported that his residence was entered and three suits of clothes, a brown felt hat, a woman's gold wrist watch and a strand of white pearl beads stolen. The marauder cut through the wire screen and broke the glass in a rear door to enter the house.

At the residence of Abe Hyman, 504 N. King St., a thief entered through a window and stole a dollar and a miniature sword from an upstairs bedroom. He left through the front door, which was found unlocked.

Adverse weather reports are being received daily but Captain Boyd states just as soon as more encouraging reports were received they will take off immediately for Harbor Grace, New Foundland. The monoplane Columbia is being given a daily workout at Tea Hill.

EXPLOSION OF STILL KILLS 4

REPORT ON NARCOTIC EVIL IS BEFORE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—While numerous other considerations awaited hearing before the League of Nations, the report of the narcotic evil of the world will gain outstanding attention today.

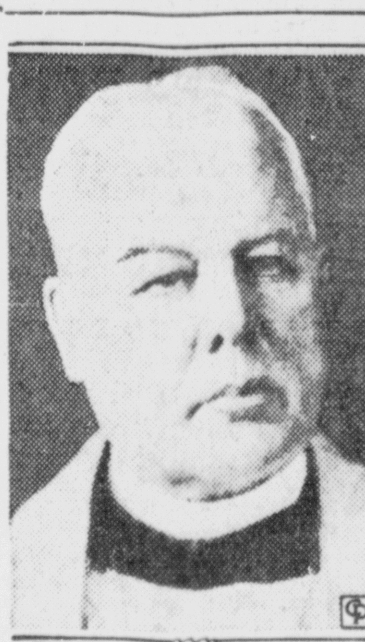

The assembly committee on social and general questions will formally hear the conclusions compiled by a special committee appointed for the purpose. The main contents of the report, it is understood, will point out that the illicit drug traffic has increased rapidly, with Turkey, Persia, France, Japan and Switzerland as the chief sources.

Discussions continued meanwhile on the advisability of calling a new general disarmament conference in the hope of reducing the startling military burdens now endured by most European nations. A tentative date under discussion between the leading powers centered on November of 1931, which would follow in the footsteps of the twelfth meeting of the League of Nations.

BISHOP LEONARD SUCCUMBS

BISHOP LEONARD GAMBIE, O., Sept. 22.—The infirmities of age today had resulted in the death of Bishop William A. Leonard, 82, of the Episcopal Church, at his home here.

Although the Bishop put up a brave fight to the end, hope that he might regain his strength and recover dimmed Friday night when he suffered a relapse. Death came shortly after 5 p. m. Sunday.

Funeral services for the dead Bishop will be held here Tuesday and in Cleveland Thursday where the body will be interred in a crypt at the Trinity Cathedral.

Bishop Leonard, who presided over the northern Ohio diocese for more than forty years, will be succeeded by the Rt. Reverend Warren Lincoln Rogers, of Cleveland. Bishop Rogers has been coadjutor to Bishop Leonard for the past five years.

REBELLION SWEEPS CHILE; AMERICANS ARE UNDER ARREST

Government Claims Insurrection Is Put Down By Troops

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 22.—A revolt staged by political exiles against the administration of President Carlos Ibanez of Chile has ended in failure, it was announced in a Chilean government communique which was given out by the Chilean embassy here today.

Leaders of the abortive insurrection have been arrested and will be tried by court-martial, the communique declared. Two Americans, alleged to have piloted the plane in which the exiles flew from Argentina to Chile, also were arrested, it was said.

In spite of this communique, the Argentine press declared the revolt had succeeded. A rigorous censorship of all Chilean telegraph and telephone lines continued in force.

PILOT WRECKS PLANE SAFELY

Mail Ship Crashes And Burns

WARREN, O., Sept. 22.—Another feat was added to the record of miracles in aviation today, as the charred wreckage of a mail plane which crashed to the ground after its engine stalled at a height of 5,000 feet, was being removed from the field near here where it landed yesterday.

Preferring to stay with his ship when the engine went dead, Amers M. Banks, 29, of New York, pilot of the craft, narrowly escaped death when he made an attempt to bring the plane safely to the ground. Banks sustained a bruised knee and was able to escape from the plane as it burst into flames upon landing.

Banks brought the plane down in the field between two houses, striking a telephone pole which stopped the craft within a yard of a highway.

Warren firemen extinguished the fire and saved twenty-eight sacks of mail. Three bags and several packages were destroyed.

FORMER MINISTER OF WAR ENDS LIFE

BUCHAREST, Sept. 22.—A sensation was created in official circles here with a report printed in the newspaper Lupta today that General Mircescu, former war minister and close friend of King Carol, had shot himself and was near death.

The military leader, who had a large hand in arranging the coup that brought Carol back to Romania and upon the throne, was questioned that he be allowed to discontinue his connections with an alleged espionage affair, Lupta reported.

BATH TWP. TO BUILD ADDITION TO PRESENT SCHOOL BUILDING

To finance construction of a proposed addition to the present Bath Twp. combination High school and grade building at Osborn and suitably equip it, a bond issue for $180,000 to be voted upon at the general election November 4 has been authorized by the board of education of Bath Twp. Consolidated Rural School District.

The present school building was originally built to accommodate approximately 725 pupils and with the present enrollment of nearly 1,000 school children, the school board has concluded the structure is inadequate and should be enlarged to provide better educational facilities.

It is estimated that an extra tax levy of 1.44 mills would retire the principal and interest of the bond issue over a period of twenty-three years.

At least one other bond issue and possibly two in addition to four proposed extra tax levies out side the fifteen-mill limitation will be voted upon in Greene Co., at the November 4 election, the board of election reveals.

Beaver Creek Twp. School District has also authorized a bond issue of $180,000 to purchase a site and to build a new school building.

Cedarville voters will be asked to approve continuance of a special two-mill tax levy for five more years to cover the expense of electric street lighting in the village.

Xenia city school district, Miami Twp. Rural School District and Ross Twp. Centralized School District have each authorized the submission to voters of proposed three-mill extra levies for five years to meet school expenses.

SCHOOL PAPER WILL BE DROPPED UNLESS ACCORDED SUPPORT

First issue of the Central High "Review," school weekly, a mimeograph edition containing eight pages, made its appearance last Friday and was distributed free of charge to students.

Subscriptions for the weekly are being solicited, and if at least 200 subscriptions are not obtained by the first of the week the paper will probably be discontinued for the remainder of the year inasmuch as the school failed to support a printed edition last year and the mimeographed type of "Review" was issued during the latter part of the year.

The complete "Review" staff for this year has been selected, headed by Miss Dorothy Lunsford as editor-in-chief and Miss Lois Spahr as assistant editor. Other staff members include: sports editor, Elwood Shaffer; assistant sports editor, Howard Thompson; feature editor, Anita Cherry; society editor, Jane Harner; joke editor, Betty Lorimer; music editor, Eileen Sayre; "inquiring" reporter, Thelma Yeakley; circulation editor, Mary Hayward; general reporter, Mary Nel Dunkel; exchange editor, Martha Perilli; business manager, William Eichman; assistant business manager, Culver Dawson; artists, Jack Whitney and Robert Chew; typists, Dora Hayward and John Custer.

Virtually all positions on the staff of the paper are being filled by new students as most of the staff members last year have graduated.

The weekly is beginning the fourteenth consecutive year of its existence. It was founded in 1917 under Miss Janet McBane as faculty advisor.

responsible for falling exports and bitterness against the United States abroad; and that, in short, "Republican prosperity" has become, in fact, "Republican hard times."

While the Democratic plan of attack takes in, of course, the whole country, the real spear-head of the attack will be centered in some 101 congressional districts where in recent elections the margin of victory has been expressed in 5,000 votes either way. This list has been carefully compiled, and represents weeks of research and concentration.

The present Republican majority in the house is 102 over all. Thus to gain control of the house to the point of organization the Democrats will have to gain fifty-two seats—a Herculean undertaking and one that no party has ever accomplished in an election. But, taking the 100 districts where the margin of victory either way is expressed in 5,000 votes or less, and to add to it the abnormal conditions that prevail this year as to business and prohibition discontent, and the net result is to make the Democrats singularly hopeful and confident.

Next week will see President Hoover himself get into the campaign.

In the space of one week he is to make four speeches in widely separated sections of the country. One in Cleveland, two in Boston, and one in North Carolina. The spots were selected partly for strategic reasons, presumably. It is no secret that the Republicans are nervous over Ohio this year, where in addition to twenty-two members of the house there is also a senator to be elected this year, Roscoe C. McCulloch, Republican, who is opposed by Robert J. Bulkley, Democratic.

In Massachusetts there is also a farm senatorial struggle with a Republican-dry, William M. Butler, being opposed by a Democratic-wet, Marcus A. Coolidge. The Democrats carried Massachusetts in 1928.

Down in North Carolina the Republicans have two congressmen, thanks to its bolt of Smith two years ago. Mr. Hoover's trip into the old North state might be regarded as his contribution to the Republican effort to save something out of the 1928 victory there. Anyway, the campaign is on, and November 4 will render the verdict.

CEDARVILLE SCOUT TROOP IS FORMED

Formation of a new Boy Scout troop being organized at Cedarville is expected to be sanctioned at a meeting of the Greene County District Boy Scout Committee to be held Monday night, September 29 in the office of Louis Hamerle, city school superintendent, at Central High School.

The meeting was called by Schuyler McClellan, district Scout commissioner, who will be in charge.

Cedarville has a Scout troop but it has been inactive for the last three years and the district committee will vote on the question of authorizing its re-organization.

Plans for the participation of local Scouts in the Sesqui-Centennial of the battle of Piqua which will be celebrated at Springfield, Friday, October 10, will also be discussed.

The Trade-mark

OLD SILVERSMITHS, in order to help people tell pure silver from cheaper imitations, marked the real thing "sterling"

In a like manner, manufacturers, who stand back of their wares, identify them with trade-marks that are your guarantee of quality. By advertising these trade-marks, they focus on their products the searchlight of attention.

Only good goods, fairly priced, can flourish in this light of publicity. For no merchandise and no business can thrive under the weight of public condemnation.

That is why a manufacturer, or a merchant, places the whole reputation of his business at stake every time he advertises. His goods must be as advertised.

So, in looking through this paper, remember this: the man who spends his money to invite your consideration of his wares backs up his belief in his goods and leaves the final decision to you.

It pays you to read the advertisements. It pays you to buy advertised products.

Advertising is your protection

OFFICER'S BULLETS SPILL BOOZE IN BOOTLEGGER'S CAR

Two bullets which pierced the rear of his auto and are believed by authorities to have punctured containers of liquor, saturating the upholstery of the machine with whiskey, may prove the downfall of James H. Wilson, 36, colored, 327 E. Main St., alleged bootlegger, who is being held in the County Jail facing the prospect of being prosecuted for third offense of violation of the liquor law.

Cruising along the Cincinnati Pike, L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, attempted to stop Wilson's auto near Mt. Holly Saturday night in the belief the Negro was running liquor through to Xenia. Wilson speeded up and the officer gave chase on his motorcycle.

Pursuer and pursued went through Spring Valley at great speed and when the fugitive turned off the highway onto the New Burlington Pike, Davis temporarily gave up the race because he was blinded by the dust thrown up from the wheels of the auto on the gravel road.

While turning a sharp curve in the dirt road at high speed, the auto upset but turned completely over, righted itself and the driver sped away, authorities said.

The road patrolman returned to Xenia, obtained an automobile and with Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, renewed the search for Wilson. They apprehended him later on the Clifton-Wilberforce Pike.

A search of the machine revealed no booze but the upholstery was saturated with liquor, it is claimed. During the chase earlier in the evening Davis had fired several shots at the escaping car and an examination disclosed two bullet holes in the rear of the auto. The bullets are thought to have penetrated this or bottles of liquor which authorities are convinced were stacked in the rear seat and on the floor.

Wilson is expected to be arraigned in Probate Court on a charge of transporting liquor. He was fined $750 and costs on a transporting charge in the Springfield Municipal Court May 17, 1929 and last, April 7 assessed $800 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith for possessing liquor.

Recalls Andree

Memories of the ill-fated Andree polar expedition are still etched clearly on the mind of Otto E. Nilsson, of Kenosha, Wis., above, since he was sent, as a sailor-youth of 18, by the Swedish government, one of 25 men, to Spitzbergen, to establish a base for Andree. The party remained on the Arctic ice three months and returned to search for the lost explorers two years later.

WARNING!

MEMBERS of Foody Post, American Legion, are warning citizens of the activities of a man selling flags, representing himself as an agent for the Legion and a Legionnaire.

The man is said to have "worked" Fairfield and Osborn and then went to Springfield, where he evaded arrest on a warrant issued for him there. Legion members say the solicitor has no connection with that organization and is not authorized to represent the Legion in selling flags or in any other connection.

VICTIMS' GUN USED FOR HOLD-UP

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—How an unarmed bandit borrowed a gun from his victims to hold them up, then looted the safe of the United Artists Theater here and kidnapped two theater employees was learned today as police investigated the daylight robbery.

Holding his hand in a coat pocket as though it held a gun the robber and a companion herded ten employees of the theater into an office and there looted the safe of $910 in cash. The bandit procured a gun in the manager's desk and withdrew his empty hand from the coat pocket with a sigh of relief.

Leaving the employees bound the pair kidnapped two theater workers.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A SOLEMN WARNING—It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved? But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.—Matthew 19:24, 25, 26.

POSTAL INCREASE

The postmaster-general states that he will recommend to the next congress an increase in the first-class postal rate, as one means of making the post-office department self-sustaining. Whether or not this is necessary or would be equitable is a question he referred to in a recent speech, in Detroit.

The mere fact that the purchasing power of the cent has dropped since 1885, when the present letter rate was established, does not necessarily prove that first-class mail matter is now being handled at a loss. Consequently neither this fact nor the rise in wages can be argued as sufficient reason for increasing the letter rate. The non sequitur in the postmaster-general's argument lies in disregarding the probability that two cents has been enough to carry a letter at any time since 1885 if all the extraneous charges against first-class matter were written off.

The postoffice department ought to be self-sustaining. As means to making it so, operating expenses must be reduced to a minimum and all franchise and subsidies charged to the departments or agencies of the government where they originate. They are not properly chargeable against postal revenues. Only after that ought an increase in postal rates be resorted to. All this the postmaster-general accepts as fundamental.

The postmaster-general admits the injustice of charging such subsidies to the postal service. The injustice would be quite as great if the letter rate were unduly increased in order to cover a deficit caused by carrying a tremendous tonnage of unsealed circulars and other advertising matter at uneconomical rates. A more convincing statement of the necessity for boosting the letter rate than was contained in Mr. Brown's address will have to be forthcoming before the public will accept any increase without protest.

SCHOOL AND HOME

A good many parents seem to pack off their children to school these days with the same feeling of escape that moved a man to exclaim, as he shoved his chit across a Shanghai bar: "Thank goodness, that's paid." The chit came back on "No. 1 day," along with other evidences of responsibility put off, but not evaded.

There is a "No. 1 day" for those parents, too, who think that the opening of school permits them to shift to teachers the responsibility for bringing up their children; a day of retribution for many a parent and many a youngster. Any number of boys and girls have gone wrong and any number of gray heads have gone down to their graves in sorrow, as a result of the latter forgetting that there is no substitute for the home in character building.

The immediate function of the public school is to impart "learning." Although its curriculum and discipline are designed to aid in starting young people out into the world with the necessary mental and moral equipment for success, their influence in this direction is necessarily restricted.

The teachers, who has a child under her care for only a few hours a day, can't buttress its character against the gin and pitfalls of the world, when it spends the rest of the 24 hours in an atmosphere of parental indifference or neglect.

The fathers and mothers who have brought the school population into the world owe both the world and their children a debt of care and supervision. They may wash their hands of their young hopefuls, when they start them on their way to school. They can't wash their hands of the potential consequences of forgetting that it is the home that makes or breaks their children's future.

The person who drives through the country hitting fifty or sixty would see more if he would stay home and look out of the front window.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

A SIGN OF GOOD TIMES

Well, here is a sure sign of returning prosperity. Concert managers from many parts of the country say advance bookings for musical events show an increase of 20 per cent over last season. Usually concert attendance declines when times are bad. Good times bring crowds.

DON'T HUNT HEALTH

Don't hunt health. It's like happiness; you can't find it by setting out to look for it. Health flourishes when we live normally and don't think too much about ourselves. Says Dr. Robert Hutchison, British authority:

"Fussiness about health increases fears and impairs the serenity which is the basis both of health and of happiness. The old ignorance about the body and stolid resignation to its ills was probably a more healthy attitude, and certainly a happier one, than the modern curiosity and over-anxiety."

"Eat moderately, taking ordinary mixed diet, and don't worry about anything else. Likes and dislikes, however, should be listened to; they are nature's indication of what probably agrees and disagrees."

"I often think it is a pity Moses ever laid down a sanitary code for it has implanted the seeds of hypochondriasis, which has flourished ever since."

PLAY AND WORK

Always controversy as to whether the tired business man plays too much golf or something else. If he worked in the right way, we wouldn't need so much play for recreation. We do not work too much, but too intensely, too nervously, too wastefully.

WHO'S WHO

Seventy-three per cent in the new "Who's Who" are college graduates. That may mean much or little. On the face of the returns it looks as though money spent to go to college is a sound investment. It's not too late to go this year, if you have the ambition.

WOMEN AND TALK

Twenty women in a Texas town were silent for a day to prove women don't talk too much. Even tables of bridge were hushed. The Chinaman has a proverb: "Can happen." He means—anything can happen. Is this to be another flagpole sitting contest or what? Anyway, this column votes for women who talk.

THE HUNTER

In a straw vote taken among 10,000 Massachusetts children fewer than half the boys said they preferred to spend their playtime at home. That's not altogether the fault of home parents. More than half the girls preferred home. Instinct comes into play. Man, from old days on the earth, is the hunter. Boys are little men and men are little boys.

THEORY AND PRACTICE
NEW YORK CITY, New York.—Theoretically the Stock Exchange is a beneficent organization affording a clearing house for traffic in the securities of legitimate business concerns.

In reality, it is the biggest licensed gambling house in the world.

When the Bull market was under way approximately 400 brokers of the Exchange's large membership were actively engaged around the trading posts.

With a billion-dollar turnover a day and brokers getting $25 a hundred on purchases or sales over par it's easy to see why the price of seats on the Exchange leaped from $100,000 to $650,000 a copy.

A limited number of tables and all the suckers on earth fighting each other to get in and play to the tune of a billion a day!

Dick Whitney may call it a "barometer" if he cares to. After all, what difference does it make what you call it?

Anyone who knows the game along The Street of Queer Percentages will tell you that the interest charges on margin that the Saps cough up are sufficient to pay the overhead of the most expensive offices down there.

And some of the offices in the Bonded Bldg. are varnished until they're brighter than the seat of the Pastor's pants.

ACCORDING TO HOYLE

Years ago the regulations governing the Exchange were contained in a pamphlet, meagre as the bank balance of an outspoken clergyman.

As the membership increased and the Talent of The Brothers became manifest, new rules and restrictions were added.

Each "last one" was met by a fresh Verboten.

Today the book of rules and regulations is a puffy affair, wide as a winner's smile.

In point of girth and "intensity" it bears the same relation to the old book of rules that a Wyoming cyclone bears to a school girl's sigh.

Denying Authorship of Jones Law May Endanger Senator's Election

WASHINGTON.—Unpleasant as it must be for Senator Wesley L. Jones—his home town of Seattle is in a terrific prohibition-violation jam, involving his close political associates—not one hint is heard, even from the wettest of the wets, of so much as a suspicion that Wesley himself has done anything intentionally wrong.

This is quite a compliment to the senator. Is it not?
Senator Jones is given full credit, alike in wet and dry circles here, for being a thoroughly honest prohibitionist.

In a way, his honesty is referred to as his weakness.

That is to say, he is considered unsophisticated—an elderly individual who never sowed a wild oat in his life—a lawmaker who, in his youth, never went out with the boys—a guileless person who believes whatever is told to him—a senator who could stand on a bridge, looking down into a river of Haig and Haig and have not the slightest inkling that it was anything but straight H-2-O.

Considering that this is the type of man he is, in case it should appear that the senator's confidence really has been betrayed (as asserted by numerous witnesses), is it credible that his political rivals are planning to use it against him when he seeks re-election?

The fact that this evidently is exactly what they are planning just goes to show that aspirants for office will adopt almost any means to gratify their ambitions.

His rivals are as sure as they are born that Wesley is strictly on the up-and-up personally; nevertheless, if they can convince the voters that a lot of booze-smugglers, hi-jackers and miscellaneous racketeers have played horse with him, they propose to take advantage of it, in an effort to deprive him of his toga in 1932.

Jones is the G. O. P.'s assistant senate leader and his Republican brethren would holler on accepting responsibility for any ominous predictions concerning his prospects, or I could quote several first-class authorities in his own party ranks who happen to be lingering in Washington, to the effect that "Wes" (as they call him) is mighty lucky not to be running this year.

(These unfavorable reactions wear off sometimes.)

The experts incidentally mention, as perhaps a misjudgment on his part, the circumstance that the Seattle-ite has said a thing or two recently which the dries do not like overly well. Their theory is that he cannot hope to make friends with the wets; hence it would be wisest to stay 100 per cent solid with the dries.

In these critics' opinion, one of Wes' errors was in reneging on authorship of the Jones "five and ten" law.

"The bill," he informed the press recently, "was not mine. It was drawn by and came from the justice department"—and, truly enough, a senator or representative often lends his name to a bill he simply has introduced by request, though generally he is friendly to it.

Anyway, the "five and ten" law invested Wesley with considerable prestige—indeed, too much, he seems to have felt, when his own party convention in his own state proclaimed wet principles a few weeks ago—and Wes himself moistened sufficiently to say he was ready to vote for a prohibition referendum if the home folk insisted. That was the other utterance the critics view pessimistically.

Not that practical politicians deny plasticity in a senator.

Almost simultaneously with Wesley's announcement, Senator Thom as J. Walsh of Montana (unlike Wes, a Democrat, but like him, always previously as dry as Death valley) expressed himself on the subject of prohibition almost identically with the Seattle-ite—and the critics pronounced it sound judgment on Tom's part.

But Senator Walsh is many other things besides a dry; his dryness, if anything, has handicapped him. Senator Jones' dryness has been his principal capital.

As the political critics calculate his chances, he may lose as a dry; as a wet he is sure to.

Peter's Adventures

COWS IN ANT-TOWN!

"Cows' milk!" Peter gasped. "Who ever heard of such a thing in Ant Hill!"

"Every Ant who lives here," answered Busy.

"But I haven't seen any cows! Where do you pasture them?" demanded Peter.

The boy had spoken louder than he knew. His question attracted the attention of one of the nurses just relieved from duty. This nurse stared at Peter a second, then burst into an ant chuckle.

"Who's your friend, Busy?" asked she, dunderhead, I'd say. Then suddenly the Nurse cried out loudly:

"Come on over, sisters, and see who's here! Busy has brought in some strange creature who walks on two legs and doesn't know we keep cows in Ant Hill. Did you ever hear anything so funny?"

The Nurses came running and surrounded the boy, and for a moment Peter feared he was in for it.

"Now I know how the monkey in the zoo feels," thought he, and in spite of possible danger, almost laughed in the Ants' faces. However, he controlled himself and paying no attention to the rude crowd, turned to Busy.

"I may seem stupid to your friends, but explain to them I've not been in Ant Hill long enough to know all about your manner and customs. Maybe one of the reasons I've missed seeing the live stock here is that I've been too busy helping you carry the eggs over from the old hill."

I have omitted the Sunday breakfast in this day's menu. A fairly simple one would go best with these rather elaborate menus for the rest of the day, I think.

Everyone has their own way of making toasted cheese sandwiches. Here is a good way.

Today's Recipes

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches—To make good toasted cheese sandwiches butter both slices of bread. Spread liberally with cream cheese, place together as a sandwich, then butter the outside of the sandwich before toasting. If toasted in the oven, butter only the side exposed to the heat. When that is toasted a golden brown, turn and butter the other side before toasting. This prevents the butter from melting away before bread is toasted.

Gelatin Salad—One-half small head cabbage, one green pepper, one bunch celery, one cup left over lima beans. The vegetables were chopped, the gelatin colored a pale green and seasoned well with pepper, salt and onion juice. Served on crisp lettuce, garnished with salad dressing and cucumber rings.

Suggestions

Dinner Ice

The dinner ice should follow the meat course, when another hot course comes next. In the proper sequence of courses each should be the greatest possible contrast to the one preceding it, so that appetite and relish for the dish may be stimulated. Consequently when a game course followed the main meat course an ice was introduced between the two so that the palate should be prepared to receive a separate course, to precede the salad, for this would be to commit the error of having a chilled salad to follow the chill of the ice.

Judge Health of Baby By Weight

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Weight is the most important single thing to know about the baby. Its general state of health is better judged by that than by anything else.

Of course when an acute condition arises, such as diarrhea or other forms of indigestion, or fever or convulsions, these symptoms temporarily become of paramount importance. But even so, when the acute condition is all over the final weight of the baby is the measure of the amount of damage the acute sickness has done.

In general, a healthy baby is one that is steadily gaining weight. In general, an adequate infant diet is one on which the baby is gaining weight.

Dr. W. McKim Marriott is one of the most brilliant of American children specialists. I am greatly indebted to his recent clearly written book on "Infant Nutrition."

"The chief cause of failure in infant feeding," according to Dr. Marriott, "is lack of sufficient food of good nutritive value."

Normal babies born at full term weigh, on the average, 7 1/2 pounds. Boys are usually slightly heavier than girls.

When properly fed a baby should double its weight at the end of five months, and triple it at the end of a year. At the end of a year a seven-pound baby should weigh 21 pounds, and at the end of the second year should weigh 28 pounds.

It is by all odds the life span of the most rapid increase in weight and growth. At no later period in life of equal duration does the weight increase so rapidly.

The food must, therefore, contain a larger amount of the elements of growth than at any later period.

Not only that, but the rate at which a baby's nutrition is carried on is much higher than an adult's. At rest a baby's energy exchange is twice as high per pound of body weight as an adult's. But a baby is by no means always at rest. Vigorous crying will temporarily increase the rate of energy exchange over 100 per cent.

So in calculating for a baby's diet requirements we must allow for not only nutritional needs at rest, but growth, and for the more rapid energy exchange of infancy.

We must also allow for increased food, or unassimilated food. The whole circulation amounts for the infant to nearly four times as many calories in its food per pound as the adult requires.

(EDITORS NOTE: Dr. Clending cannot disprove or give personal answers to letters from readers. Where questions are of general interest, however, they will be taken up, in order, in the daily column. Desperate Measures Not Effective

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"MY BOY FRIEND is losing interest in me. How can I win him back?" is one of the questions I dread trying to answer. If anyone knows the answer, and can give me a never failing, foolproof recipe for same I will be deeply grateful.

The only answer I know of is to let him have as much freedom as he wants, and trust that his heartstrings will pull him back your way sometime. Any wild efforts on the girl's part to hold him are apt to push him farther away.

"Sit tight," is the best advice I can give to either sex in this predicament. Try to believe that the loss of this young man is NOT the most calamitous thing that could possibly happen. I know that is almost impossible, but try it. Dig into work, and go out if you possibly can. If not, see if there isn't some one who needs your help and interest yourself in them. It's surprising how tough human hearts are, and how they tend to heal even of these almost mortal love wounds.

Some people who have been so hurt recover so completely that they wonder what was the matter with them that they felt so badly at the time, and sometimes they even forget they ever have been wounded. But, of course, no one who is in the midst of an unhappy love affair is going to believe that.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 17 and married. I love my husband very much and know he loves me. My husband's folks were against him marrying me. They tried to discourage him, and now are trying to separate us."

"We have our own house and I do my own work. We have often been to my father-in-law's place, but they have never been to see us. Should I worry or not?"

"WORRIED WIFE."

What would you do, dear if you wanted very much to make someone like you—someone not an "in-law"? You'd try your very best to treat them so nicely that they couldn't help liking you in return, wouldn't you?

Well, if I were you, I would see all the good things I could in my husband's people and forget the things that you don't like. I would make them MY people as much as I possibly could, whether they reciprocated at first or not. And I would try to make them love me, so that your husband could keep both his own people, whom he needs, and you, too.

Have you invited your father-in-law and family to come to see you? If not, do so, and if you have, keep on inviting them. And try not to worry about the matter if they don't "fall" for you at first. Be patient.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been married 20 years and am the mother of four living children, the oldest a frail girl of 14. A boy of seven is the youngest. My husband is not good to me. He will not support me any more. I would leave and work for my living, but my oldest daughter is not able to look after the children and duties of the home. He accuses me of meeting other men, which is not the truth. I think he is also jealous of me."

"He does not want me to go anywhere. What would you do? I still love him just as much as I did 20 years ago. I do not want to leave my children if I can help it."

"BROKEN HEARTED."

How long has this been going on? I mean how long has your husband suspected you of meeting other men, and what started it? Surely you have done nothing to warrant his feeling.

If you still love him, try to win him over and show him that you are as true as true can be. Don't go anywhere without him or one of the children; be loving and make him feel that you care very much and think him just right.

As long as you are true to him and care for him, the children and the house, the law will compel him to support you.

ALWAYS HOPEFUL: I am afraid the foregoing advice is all I can offer you my dear. If the boy friend is slipping in his allegiance and being led away by this pal of his, there isn't what you can do but let him go and try to hide your hurt. Maybe if he thinks he is losing you he will hurry back.

Colored Hurler Silences Merchants' Guns

KENTUCKY BOY LETS SLUGGERS HAVE BUT THREE HITS SUNDAY

Deserves Shutout As Idle Hour Defeats Merchants

By PHIL FRAME

Hailing from the hills of Kentucky, a diminutive colored youth named Dooley, who possessed more curves than a corkscrew, parted with only three hits as he pitched the Idle Hour Club colored baseball nine of this city to an easy 5 to 1 victory over the Xenia Merchants in the Sunday matinee game at Washington Park.

It was through no fault of their own that the Merchants were able to score even run. Inability of Dooley to locate the plate in the first round was responsible for the charity marker, the Merchants thereby escaping a shutout. Johnson walked and Weller sacrificed him to second. A wild pitch advanced the runner to third. Conley also walked and Johnson scored as Durnbaugh grounded out, Cunningham to Shoecraft.

From then on it was one goose egg after another for the Merchants. Dooley did not yield a single hit in the first five innings. He struck out a total of ten batters and only one Merchant player progressed as far as the third station in the last eight rounds.

The first Merchant hit came in the sixth when Johnson beat out a scratch infield hit, a slow roller which bounded over Dooley's head. Moore's double in the seventh and a single by Durnbaugh in the ninth were the only other safe drives off Dooley's intelligent outplay.

Blake, who pitched for the Merchants, also hurled a creditable game and struck out nine batters. Although he was touched for ten hits the breaks went against him.

The Idle Hour aggregation proved a versatile bunch. They had been cleaning up everything in sight in softball this season, so just for the sake of variety the boys got up a baseball team which outclassed the Merchants in every phase of the pastime. A fumble by Joe Anderson in the ninth was the only fielding slip made by the winners, whereas the Merchants gave Blake ranged support.

Trailing 1 to 0 at the close of the second round, the Idle Hour team bunched two hits with three errors to score three runs in the third stanza. Buford singled, Porter hit to Ruse, whose throw was too late to force Buford at second and both runners were safe. Cockran dumped a hit in short left and when Ruse took Johnson's relay and segued to third, Cyphers let the ball slip threw him. Buford scoring. Cyphers retrieved the ball and made a wild throw to the plate permitting Porter to score. Meanwhile Cockran had raced around to third and he also scored when Jug Conley "juggled" Anderson's tap to second. Joe stole second and also third. Ward lifted a fly to Moore, whose accurate relay to the plate cut off Anderson's attempt to score.

Dooley, first up in the fourth, helped out his own cause with a home run. The hit was a long drive to center which bounced over the center field bill boards. In the sixth with one down, Cunningham got a hit in short left and by fast running stretched it into a double. He scored on a single by McCullen.

Porter, Cunningham and McCullen each hit safely twice for the winners while Joe Anderson was convicted of the theft of no fewer than three bases.

Next Sunday the Merchants will open a three-game series with a Yellow Springs team.

With the Giants sinking out of the world series picture as September's days fly by, Jimmy Fox looms as the best looking first baseman who may be seen in the annual classic this year.

Had the Giants a better chance the honor would have to go to Bill Terry, who this season has proven himself one of the best first basemen the big leagues have seen in a long, long time.

Charles Grimm of the Chicago Cubs has a better fielding average than Fox, who ranks second in this department of the five men.

GRANVILLE, O., Sept. 22.—Denison University will have a football team composed largely of sophomores before the end of the season. Such is the belief of Coach Edson C. "Babe" Rupp after looking over the Baptists' gridiron material.

Denison has nine lettermen available from the 1929 eleven but these boys have a real battle on their hands to retain their position in face of the competition which is a fine lot of sophomores are offering.

The attention which Coach Rupp and his assistants have been giving Edward Spear, Bill Clark, Lauri "Worry" Wart and Tom Craig indicates that the backfield will be reconstructed around these stars of last year's fresh team.

Robert "Pat" Adams, Roland "Tiny" Miller and John Shepherd have showed themselves promising sophomore material for line positions. Adams, a much-touted high school end from Dayton, is faced with stern competition, however, Ray Scott, an other Dayton lad, and Earl Rupp, are battling hard for end posts. Both won letters at that position last year.

Other lettermen who have returned are Russell Gell, Paul Saurer, Orrville, Bob Edwards and George Pipely, line men, and Thorne Rines, Tom Gabele and Melvin Philbrick, backfield.

Beyond his assertion regarding the newly-available material and the statement that he expected to build from it a better team than last year, Coach Rupp declined to make any prediction regarding the success of Denison in the Buckeye Conference campaign.

Little hope is held for more than glory to be won in the game with Michigan, but other teams which will be tackled seem more in Denison's class.

The season will open September 27 at Ann Arbor where the Baptists tackle the Wolverines. Other games include four in the Buckeye Conference round robin and three in the Ohio conference.

REPORTS SAY MCCARTHY WILL MANAGE YANKS, HORNSBY CUBS

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Joe McCarthy, for the past five years manager of the Chicago Bruins, will pilot the Yankees in 1931, and Rogers Hornsby, stormy petrel and "mystery man" of the National League, will direct the destinies of the Chicago team.

That, at least, was the opinion today of those in touch with baseball here and in Chicago and it is substantiated in a measure by the attitude expressed by officials of the Chicago club. As late as last Saturday President Veeck of the Cubs declared that McCarthy's future with the Chicago club has not been determined.

According to McCarthy's friends, the Bruin pilot has decided to resign his post, and will do so as soon as the Cubs complete their season. The three-year contract under which he is operating will expire this year.

McCarthy is expected to make a definite announcement as soon as he has conferred with Veeck, and William Wrigley, owner of the team, upon return of the Bruins to the Windy City Thursday. To date he has refused to discuss his position and it is only through his intimates that his dissatisfaction with conditions at Chicago has been learned.

None of the officials of the New York club would confirm the report that McCarthy would succeed Bob Shawkey at the Yankee Stadium, but it is pointed out that they are in no position to issue a statement at this time.

McCarthy is still under contract to the Chicago club and until he has fulfilled his obligation there, no other club has a right to dicker for his services.

Said McCarthy in Boston: "Up to now I have had no trouble with any official of the Cubs. And neither have I fought with Hornsby. All the players are working hard to win a second pennant."

William Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, "The story is based on pure imagination." William Veeck, president of the Cubs, "Manager Joe McCarthy has a contract which runs until January 1," he said. "We will not hire a new manager, Roger Hornsby or anyone else, until we have discussed the situation with McCarthy."

Ed Harrow, business manager of the Yankees, "The report that Joe McCarthy is to manage the Yankees next season is just a wild rumor."

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Regardless of how the Chicago Cubs finish this year's race in the National League Joe McCarthy will not be a copyright story in the Chicago Herald and Examiner today.

The story points to an asserted disagreement between owner William Wrigley, Jr., and President William I. Veeck.

Although McCarthy's contract expires at the end of the 1930 season no mention has been made by the Cubs of any renewal of McCarthy's contract. It is pointed out in fact all questions both here and in the east regarding this situation have for some time been sidestepped by both Wrigley and Veeck.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS

Written for Central Press

The more a farmer knows about agricultural history, here and in other countries, the less stock he takes in any kind of plan to fix the prices of farm products.

Plenty of people do believe in price fixing, however. They point to the fixing of railroad rates by the interstate commerce commission, the alleged fixing of interest rates by the Federal Reserve banks, the alleged fixing of prices by big manufacturers, and argue from this that it is quite possible to fix farm prices at a profitable level.

Mostly it is a waste of time trying to argue with an individual who has this idea in his head. It does seem, however, that the object lessons of the last two or three years ought to convince any reasonable person.

Three ambitious schemes of price fixing were in force as recently as two years ago—the rubber restrictions in the East Indies, the sugar control plan in Cuba, and the greatest of all, the coffee control system in Brazil.

One by one these have blown up with a resounding bang. The sugar scheme went first, the Stevenson plan on rubber next, and the grand crash in Brazilian coffee followed a few months ago.

All of these, mind you, were organized with government approval, and supported by the strong arm of law. No monopoly was ever tighter than the system by which only so much coffee could be moved from the plantations down to Brazilian seaports.

But no power is as strong as economic law. Buyers scoured the world for other sources of sugar, rubber and coffee. Sales fell off and stocks on hand piled up until the whole structure collapsed.

The worst of it, perhaps, is the reaction on prices. Look over all the commodities whose prices are depressed right now, and you will find few as low, few as flat on their backs as these very three—sugar, rubber, coffee.

Sugar has not been so low in thirty years. Rubber is around 8 cents, when a reasonable price might be around 25 cents.

Possibly the situation would have been the same if there had been no attempt at price fixing. There is no way of knowing.

But no one can study these chapters of trade history and retain a child-like faith in the power of governments. Not in the sugar coffee-rubber trades, at all events.

BALLOTS RECEIVED

The Greene County board of elections has received from Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown sample copies of ballots and questions or issues ballots for the November 4 election. Included is the proposed amendment to the Ohio constitution, which would amend section 9, article XII, relating to the distribution of income and inheritance taxes, so that school districts also may benefit in the collection of those taxes by the state as well as county, city, village or township.

SPLASH! She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

Copyright, 1930, by Central Press Association, Inc.

CHAPTER 51

Kitty smiled—she couldn't help it. For the moment she was but a mermaid, confronting another of her kind, who spoke with such obvious admiration of her dive and underwater swim—at least, so Kitty read the impulsive words—that not to smile would have been rude.

Then memory returned. This was the woman whom Gordon loved! True, she probably had no idea whatever that Gordon had engaged himself to another. It was not Edith's fault that Gordon was a liar, a false lover.

But the girl does not live who can look upon her successful rival with friendliness, even though that rival may be blameless, may not even know that she is a rival.

Kitty's smile faded, and she spoke lamely. "Good evening!" Then she pulled herself to the coping and trotted away, her taste for her evening swim all gone. Not until she was in her dressing room did she recall that there had been two heads in the water when she dove, and to wonder, "Could the other have been Gordon?"

Her heart beat rapidly. If it were Gordon, she might meet him when dressed—and this she did not want to do. She took only a sketchy shower and scuttled into her clothes.

But she met no one on her way out.

Home, she wondered again. Edith's words—did they really refer to her dive? Or to something else? "No wonder," she had said. Could she have meant "no wonder he liked her?" If so, then Edith must know about Gordon and Kitty! The thought made Kitty hot. It was bad enough to have a rival, but to have that rival know her, to have her secretly exulting, was unendurable.

"Oh, I hate her, I hate her!" cried Kitty to herself. Then, common sense coming to her rescue, "Why should I? She just did as all women do—took the man she loves when she could get him! I'd take him from the whole world if I could—I would not! I would not! I don't want him, I hate him, too."

Kitty broke down again.

She could not make it stick! She did not hate him. She loved him with all her heart and she knew it, and not all the terrible things she had heard and seen could make her love the less.

Pride she had. She would soon have scorned him had he come to her. Self-respect she possessed; she would not have taken him back, no matter how he pleaded.

But of hate for either of them she had none; only regret and pain and grief and a pitiful wonder, a lack of understanding. This was the worst torture; her inability to understand what she had done, why Gordon had tricked her. Perhaps an unconscious vanity contributed to her failure to comprehend how he could prefer Edith to her.

Two days later Atlee invited her to go with him again for an evening of dancing. Desperate at her own thoughts, afraid of going to the natorium lest she again meet Edith and possibly Gordon, weary of her own company, Kitty accepted in a joyful mood.

She had only to beckon and Atlee would become again the ardent lover. Kitty was starved for affection; the sudden damping up of all that she had given Gordon, the failure of outlet for the love in her heart made some sort of self-expression necessary.

She revolted at the substitution of Atlee for Gordon; dance, supper and gaiety, seemed but pale shadows beside the longing in her heart. But outwardly she became savagely determined.

"I will have a good time!" she cried to herself. "I will not act as if Gordon Platt was the only man in the world, as if I could never be happy again because he wants another woman! He got rid of me, well, I'll stay riden!" Her grammar was as peculiar as the sense of her thought was obvious.

Atlee found her unusually kind. She invited, rather than repelled his eager arms in the taxi, and kissed him with more friendliness than she had ever shown.

"Let's go places!" she said. "Take me somewhere where it's gay."

"Sure, let's go!" His voice flamed gladness.

"Of course!" she answered. "Don't forget, we started fresh!"

He did not finish his sentence, and she did not ask him to. She did not want another proposal from Atlee. Perhaps she feared that pique and desperation might lead her to accept it! Kitty knew she could not be happy as Atlee's wife. She did not love the man, strongly as she had once been attracted to his "good" face.

He took her to a famous place of entertainment.

All New York's demi-monde knows it; and much of New York's night life centers about the strange place, which is at once a fine restaurant and the haunt of crooks of the better class. It is a resort for wealth and fashion, and a meeting place for confidence men, schemers and blackmailers.

This looked like any other night club. Kitty saw the familiar dance floor, the good orchestra in the background, the low lights, and the garish decorations.

The usual "hostess" elaborately gowned, a hard face made soft with chignon and a set smile, saw to the spending and the fun.

A liberal tip secured a good table. The waiter spread an elaborate bill of fare before them.

While they were being served, Kitty asked: "Any celebrities here?"

"The place is full of them!" answered Atlee. "That big man with the close cropped hair over there is Dan Tooney, the heavyweight. Hilaire Le Monde, the famous gambler, is with him. Just beyond is Mary Scott—you know, the correspondent on the Worthington divorce case. She's with Tony Scarrel—a bootleg king; owns three Park Avenue apartments. Just over beyond is Mordaunt, the English actor, and across—see the tiny little girl with the blue dress? That's Gabrielle Norton."

The Theater

Supposedly reliable reports have it that "Roxy," celebrated manager of the glorified New York movie palace that bears his name, will step down and out from the management of this period within a matter of days.

The information says that Roxy, the aid of Mary Pickford, although she didn't know about it.

Four years ago he was playing tennis opposite the Beverly Hills Hotel. So many tourists stopped him and asked where Mary Pickford lived that he became a guide to Pickfair, charging each customer twenty-five cents.

Two years ago he organized the Guide To The Movies Co., and took as a partner Dick Maddox, Southwestern University student. They bought an auto and started tours to the home of famous film folk at one dollar per customer. The receipts are paying their way, through school.

The most frequent question asked by strangers in Hollywood, Tyler says, is "Where do Mary and Doug live?"

CONVENIENCE AND NECESSITY

THERE ARE CERTAIN SERVICES that we enjoy in our daily routine that we have come to look upon as commonplaces. Our electric lights, our gas, our running water, our telephones, our railroads, our motor bus lines, and other such utilities can be regarded as among these commonplaces.

WE DO NOT KNOW HOW ESSENTIAL THEY ARE IN OUR DAILY routine until we are forced to do without them. Let the electric lights go out at night, let the telephone line be blown down in a storm, let the gas get low on a cold day, or let a railroad drop a train from its schedule, and then we realize what they mean to us.

AT ONE TIME THESE UTILITIES were regarded purely as conveniences, just as the automobile was once looked upon as a luxury. Today we realize that they are something more than convenient services—they have come to be necessities. For a convenience can remain so just long enough for it to become a regular matter-of-fact proposition, then after we have become educated to its constant use and reliability, it becomes a necessity.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL AIR MAIL today is a convenience. Ten years from today it will be a necessity. Airplanes, in themselves, are mighty convenient for rapid transportation today. In a few years, they will become necessities, because the world will have advanced in speed to such an extent that it will be necessary to make use of airplanes in transportation to keep pace.

THERE WAS A TIME WHEN A STORE was a convenience. One could order things by mail, or buy from an itinerant peddler. But today, your local Independent Merchant is a necessity. Perhaps you do not regard him as such, but just let his services cease, let his merchandise be taken away, and let him cease business, and you miss him more than you can tell. The services performed by your local Independent Merchant are also necessities today. Once they were just conveniences. But let him take out his telephone, stop delivery, insist upon cash, and refuse to exchange merchandise, and will soon discover how much of a necessity these services are.

IF YOU HAVE NOT BEEN ENJOYING THESE SERVICES they are at your call if you but ask for them. Your Independent Merchant is the only one who can offer them to you. By patronizing him, you can have these advantages.
